

Dr. Christina LeBedis acquired her medical degree from Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, PA and obtained a Masters in Science Surgical Research after acquiring her Bachelors of Science in Anatomy and Cell Biology at McGill University, Montreal Canada. She conducted her postdoctoral training as a resident in Diagnostic Radiology at Boston University School of Medicine and Fellowship in Abdominal Imaging at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, Boston, MA. Dr. LeBedis is currently an assistant professor at Boston Medical Center and Boston University Medical School respectively. She is awarded honors and recognized for her academic accomplishments as an educator in the field. She is a respected, invited lecturer, sits on multiple committees and boards such as Radiology Society of North America Education Exhibits, Society of Abdominal Radiology, American Association for Women Radiologists, and American Society of Emergency Radiology to name a few. She has over two dozen peer reviewed published articles, contributed to 11 textbooks, and over 25 national presentations.